Choosing a domain name: seven rules.

Before you print a single business card.

For anyone naming a business

Rule 1

Say it out loud

1. If people mishear it, they'll mistype it.
2. Try it on a friend over the phone.

Rule 2

Short beats clever

1. Fewer letters, fewer typos.
2. It has to fit on a sign, a van and a receipt.

Rule 3

Skip hyphens and numbers

1. “Is it 4 or four?” is a question that loses customers.

2. Hyphens are the first thing people forget.

Rule 4

Add what you do, or where

1. Name taken? Try yournamebakes or yournamelagos.

2. It still sounds like you, and says what you do.

Rule 5

Look at more than one extension

1. If the .com is gone, another extension may be free.

2. Our search shows them side by side, with similar names.

Rule 6

Check before you fall in love

1. Search before anyone designs a logo.

2. Got a shortlist? Bulk search checks it in one go.

Rule 7

Register it in your own name

1. Not your web designer’s, not your developer’s.

2. Use an email address you control, and keep the transfer lock on.
